This report by Witt Associates was contracted and/or requested by the City of Seattle Office of Emergency Management as part of the Regional Catastrophic Preparedness Grant Program. The author's opinions, findings, conclusions, and/or recommendations are provided solely for the use and benefit of the requesting party. Any statements, allegations, and/or recommendations in this report should not be construed as a City of Seattle Office of Emergency Management policy or decision unless so designated by other documentation. The report is based on the most accurate data available at the time of publication, and therefore is subject to change without notice.

Section I. Introduction

Under the auspices of the Regional Catastrophic Preparedness Grant Program (RCPGP), the Seattle Office of Emergency Management engaged Witt Associates to provide support in the preparation of a matrix of emergency authorities for the Federal government, Washington State government, and local governments participating in this grant as part of the Regional Catastrophic Planning Team (RCPT).

The project goal was to develop a report that identifies existing lines of authority, and if applicable, to identify ambiguities and/or conflicts and offer recommendations on how to resolve them, and finally to identify areas where emergency authorities should exist but where there are none. One part of this project was to develop a matrix of existing emergency authorities at all levels across all disciplines across the region (elected officials, emergency managers, health directors, fire chiefs, etc.). The purpose is to provide a tool that can enhance understanding and coordination among emergency management and homeland security planners and responders throughout the Puget Sound region.

Participating local jurisdictions in this project include eight counties and eleven cities identified by FEMA as the Puget Sound Region (See Catastrophic Disaster Coordination Plan). Emergency authorities from these jurisdictions as well as select State and Federal statutes and regulations that provide agencies emergency powers under their own statutory authority or following a Proclamation of Emergency by the Governor of the State of Washington or Federal Disaster Declaration by the President.

Section II. Background and Process

The development of this report involved extensive research of local, state and federal laws and plans to identify statutes that address emergency authorities. The matrix includes enough detail to be a useful tool for the user but not so detailed as to become cumbersome and unmanageable. It also provides specific references to the respective authority so further information can be found if needed. This report includes the emergency authority matrix, a section on Tribal emergency management authority, and examples of case law concerning local and state emergency authority.

This report also includes a section identifying issues and proposed solutions. These issues were initially identified by a survey sent to RCPT members, project leads and Federal agencies that are part of FEMA's Regional Interagency Steering Committee (RISC). Relevant issues and recommendations were then vetted by the Regional Catastrophic Planning Team to determine a regional consensus on issues that should be included in the report and a commitment to follow up with potential future action, whether that is through additional research, coordination among involved agencies or legislative action.

The emergency authority matrix of city, county, state and federal emergency authorities provides a brief snapshot of major statutes and regulations that provide the State of Washington, its political subdivisions (counties, cities and towns) and selected federal agencies with emergency authority and powers to prepare for and respond to disaster.

These statutes and regulations and information about them have been collected from sources including, but not limited to, the following:

- The "Authorities" section of state and local comprehensive emergency management plans
- Reports and information developed by staff from the Washington State Attorney General
- The National Response Framework

- Web and document searches
- Survey responses from Regional Catastrophic Planning Team members
- Federal agencies on the Regional Interagency Steering Committee RISC
- Department of Commerce's Bureau of Industry and Security (BIS)
- Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA)
- Department of State's Foreign Press Centers (FPC)

It is important to note that because much of this information was developed from web searches, and every effort was made for stakeholder review, some of the cited sections may be out of date.

The purpose of this matrix is to provide general reference and summary information about these authorities. This matrix is organized as follows:

- City Authorities (From various cities identified by FEMA in the Puget Sound Region)
- County Authorities (From the 8 counties identified by FEMA in the Puget Sound Region)
- State of Washington Authorities (Revised Code of Washington [RCW] and Washington Administrative Code [WAC])
- Federal authorities (Statutes, HSPDs, plans and other directives)
- An index by subject

The matrix is not intended to be all inclusive, but to provide enough information for the reader to understand the basic purpose or authority referenced. The authorities identified fall into two basic categories:

First, there are general authorities such as the establishment of fire protection or emergency medical services in a county that are general ongoing emergency related capabilities to develop and maintain organizations and resources for the day to day protection of life and property as well as for disaster response.

Secondly, there are specific powers given to the governor, local and state elected and appointed officials to respond to a specific disaster or emergency situations. These include, but are not limited to the ability to commandeer citizens and their equipment, restricting access to certain areas and special mechanisms to pay disaster costs.

The information about these specific powers can be used by local jurisdictions to identify the legal tools that are available to do all that is in their respective authority to respond to a disaster as required by law and policy.

THURSTON COUNTY	Relates to the purpose of the emergency management program: As a political subdivision of the state, Thurston County intends to comply with its responsibilities pursuant to Chapter 38.52 RCW, "Emergency Management," which responsibilities include the
Thurston County Code – Section 3.02.010 Emergency Management	establishment of a local organization for emergency/disaster management. The county emergency management plan and organization, adopted by reference in this chapter, is intended to establish the organization for the local preparation for and the carrying out of all emergency functions, other than functions for which the military forces are primarily responsible, to mitigate, prepare for, respond to, and recover from emergencies and disasters, and to aid victims suffering from injury or damage, resulting from disasters caused by all hazards, whether natural or technological or human- caused, and to provide support for search and rescue operations for persons and property in distress. However, "emergency management" or "comprehensive emergency management" does not mean preparation for emergency evacuation or relocation of residents in anticipation of nuclear attack.
	Relates to the powers and duties of the Emergency Management Director:
	Pursuant to RCW 37.52.070, the director of the department of roads and transportation services is appointed as director of emergency management (director).
Thurston County Code – Section 3.02.050 Emergency Management Director	A. The director shall have direct responsibility for the organization, administration, and operation of the division of emergency management and the Thurston County Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan (plan), subject to the direction and control of the board of county commissioners. The director's role and responsibilities are set forth in the plan and further are subject to the limitations and responsibilities set forth in Chapter 38.52 RCW.
	B. The director shall have the authority to request that the board of county commissioners (board) proclaim the existence or threatened existence of a disaster and the termination thereof, if the board is in session, or to issue such proclamation if the board is not in session, subject to action by the board to ratify or rescind such proclamation at the board's earliest practical meeting. In the absence and unavailability of the director, the county chief administrative officer shall have the same authority to act as conferred upon the director in this subsection.

Thurston County Code – Section 13.08.030 Emergency Road Closures and Load Restrictions - Application	Relates to the application of emergency road closures and load restrictions:
	(1) Load and speed limit restrictions may be imposed on roads due to freeze-thaw or other conditions when, in the opinion of the director, the roadway will be damaged by normal traffic. Either of two types of basic load restrictions may be imposed, depending upon the highway and weather conditions.
	(a) Emergency Load Restrictions. This restriction may be applied to any road when the subgrade is supersaturated and unstable. Evidence of surface deflection under traffic or free water in the base materials under less than six inches of treated materials supporting the roadway may be cause to apply this restriction.
	(b) Severe Emergency Load Restrictions. This restriction should be applied only to a roadway whose surfacing depth is insufficient to resist subgrade swell pressure or is surfaced with a light bituminous surface treatment; however, other roadways showing signs of severe distress during a freezing and thaw cycle or unusual climatic conditions can be placed under this category.
	(2) Notice will be provided to the public, highway department offices and law enforcement agencies to assure compliance with pending and imposed restrictions and to minimize inconvenience to the public. Courtesy notices on highways leading to restricted roads will be provided to the public to the extent practicable under the circumstances and in consideration of the expense to be incurred by the county.
	(3) Subject to specified weight and speed restrictions established by the director, special permits to operate on restricted roads may be issued to school buses and motor trucks transporting perishable commodities or commodities necessary for the health and welfare of local residents. School buses may be issued a letter of special permit specifying speed and/or weight restrictions which are related to their particular routes. In no event may a vehicle be granted a permit whose gross load weight on each tire exceeds five hundred fifty pounds per inch of tire width.

	Relates to reducing flood risk and establishing national policy on flood insurance: The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 is a piece of legislation passed in the United States that led to the creation of the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).
	The NFIP goals are two-fold:
National Flood Insurance Act of 1968	• To provide flood insurance for structures and contents in communities which adopt and enforce an ordinance outlining minimal floodplain management standards.
	• To identify areas of high and low flood hazard and establish flood insurance rates for structures inside each flood hazard area.
	The act was motivated by a long history of property damage and loss of life due to flooding. The legislation was finally promulgated because of the recent flood loss sustained in Florida and Louisiana following the destruction caused by the Hurricane Betsy flood surge in 1965. (FEMA.gov)

The International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA), Title II of Public Law 95-223, 91 Stat. 1626, enacted October 28, 1977	Relates to the President's authority to regulate commerce: Authorizes U.S. Presidents to regulate commerce after declaring a national emergency in response to any unusual and extraordinary threat to the United States which has a foreign source. It is largely an amendment to the Trading with the Enemy Act 1917 and the National Emergencies Act, which deal primarily with when and to what extent the President can declare an emergency. It enables the President to seize the property of a foreign country or national. These powers were transferred to FEMA in a sweeping consolidation in 1979.
National Emergencies Act	 Relates to the declaration of National Emergencies: The National Emergencies Act is a United States federal law passed in 1976 to stop open-ended states of national emergency and formalize the power of Congress to provide certain checks and balances on the emergency powers of the President. The act sets a limit of two years on states of national emergency. It also imposes certain "procedural formalities" on the President when invoking such powers. The perceived need for the law arose from the scope and number of laws granting special powers to the executive in times of national emergency (or public danger). At least two constitutional rights are subject to revocation during a state of emergency: The right to habeas corpus, under Article 1, Section 9; The right to a grand jury for members of the National Guard when in actual service, under Fifth Amendment. In addition, many provisions of statutory law are contingent on a state of national emergency, as many as 500 by one count. It was due in part to concern that a declaration of "emergency" for one purpose should not invoke every possible executive emergency power that Congress in 1976 passed the National Emergencies Act. Among other provisions, this act requires the President to declare formally a national emergency and to specify the statutory authorities to be used under such a declaration. (fpc.state.gov)

Radiological Emergency Preparedness Program Provisions: Excerpt From 1999 Independent Agencies Appropriations Provisions Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, US House of Representatives	 Relates to radiological protection: On December 7, 1979, following the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident in Pennsylvania, President Carter transferred the Federal lead role in offsite radiological emergency planning and preparedness activities from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). FEMA established the Radiological Emergency Preparedness (REP) Program to (1) ensure the health and safety of citizens living around commercial nuclear power plants would be adequately protected in the event of a nuclear power plant accident; and (2) inform and educate the public about radiological emergency preparedness. REP Program responsibilities encompass only "offsite" activities, that is, State, tribal and local government emergency planning and preparedness activities that take place beyond the nuclear power plant boundaries. Onsite activities continue to be the responsibility of the NRC. (FEMA)

An area established on non-Federal lands located within the United States or its possessions or territories for the purpose of safeguarding classified defense information or protecting Department of Defense (DOD) equipment and/or materiel. Establishment of a national defense area temporarily places such non-Federal lands under the effective control of the Department of Defense and results only from an emergency event. The senior DOD representative at the scene will define the boundary, mark it with a physical barrier, and post warning signs. The landowner's consent and cooperation will be obtained whenever possible; however, military necessity will dictate the final decision regarding location, shape, and size of the national defense area. This authority is intended to be established under emergency conditions in such situations as aircraft crashes, immobilized nuclear weapons convoys, or the emergency dispersion of military aircraft to civilian airports.

Section 109 of Public Law 96-295	Relates to preparedness around nuclear power plants: This act authorized appropriations to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in accordance with section 261 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended, and Section 305 of the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974, as amended, and for other purposes. Prohibits the issuance of a license unless there exists a State or local emergency preparedness which: (1) provides for responding to accidents at the facility; and (2) complies with the Commission's guidelines for such plans. Stipulates that in the absence of a satisfactory plan there must exist a State, local, or utility plan which provides reasonable assurances that public health and safety is not endangered.
Section 104 of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA)	Relates to response authorities for hazardous substances: (a)(1) Whenever (A) any hazardous substance is released or there is a substantial threat of such a release into the environment, or (B) there is a release or substantial threat of release into the environment of any pollutant or contaminant which may present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare, the President is authorized to act, consistent with the national contingency plan, to remove or arrange for the removal of, and provide for remedial action relating to such hazardous substance, pollutant, or contaminant at any time (including its removal from any contaminated natural resource), or take any other response measure consistent with the national contingency plan which the President deems necessary to protect the public health or welfare or the environmentetc.

Section 303 of the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act of 1986 (SARA)	 Relates to emergency planning for hazardous materials: Emergency Response plans contain information that community officials can use at the time of a chemical accident. Community emergency response plans for chemical accidents were developed under section 303. The plans must: Identify facilities and transportation routes of extremely hazardous substances; Describe emergency response procedures, on and off site; Designate a community coordinator and facility coordinator(s) to implement the plan; Outline emergency notification procedures; Describe how to determine the probable affected area and population by releases; Describe local emergency equipment and facilities and the persons responsible for them; Outline evacuation plans; Provide a training program for emergency responders (including schedules); and, Provide methods and schedules for exercising emergency response plans.
Hazardous Materials Transportation Provisions: Sections 5115 and 5116 of Title 49, United States Code	Relates to training and planning with respect to the transportation of hazardous materials: Section 5115 establishes a training curriculum for the public sector and Section 5116 provides for planning and training grants, monitoring and review.

Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act (EMTALA)	 Relates to medical care in disaster: EMTALA is a Federal law that requires all Medicare-participating hospitals with dedicated emergency departments (EDs) to perform medical care for all individuals who come to their ED regardless of their ability to pay. It also has provisions for medical care in disasters, including waivers for care in emergency situations. An EMTALA waiver allows hospitals to do the following: Direct or relocate individuals who come to the Emergency Department to an alternative off-campus site, in accordance with a State emergency or pandemic preparedness plan. Effect transfers normally prohibited under EMTALA of individuals with unstable emergency medical conditions (EMCs), so long as the transfer is necessitated by the circumstances of the declared emergency. By law, the EMTALA medical screening exam (MSE) and stabilization requirements can be waived for a hospital only if: The President has declared an emergency or disaster under the Stafford Act or the National Emergencies Act; and The Secretary invokes her/his waiver authority (which may be retroactive), including notifying Congress at least 48 hours in advance; and The waiver includes waiver of EMTALA requirements and the hospital is covered by the waiver.

Homeland Security Presidential Directive – 5	Relates to the management of domestic incidents: Homeland Security Presidential Directive 5 serves to enhance the ability of the United States to manage domestic incidents by establishing a single, comprehensive national incident management system. This management system is designed to cover the prevention, preparation, response, and recovery from terrorist attacks, major disasters, and other emergencies. The implementation of such a system would allow all levels of government throughout the nation to work efficiently and effectively together. The directive gives further detail on which government officials oversee and have authority for various parts of the national incident management system, as well making several amendments to various other HSPDs.
Homeland Security Presidential Directive – 8	Relates to national preparedness: This directive is aimed at strengthening the security and resilience of the United States through systematic preparation for the threats that pose the greatest risk to the security of the Nation, including acts of terrorism, cyber attacks, pandemics, and catastrophic natural disasters. Our national preparedness is the shared responsibility of all levels of government, the private and nonprofit sectors, and individual citizens. Everyone can contribute to safeguarding the Nation from harm. As such, while this directive is intended to galvanize action by the Federal Government, it is also aimed at facilitating an integrated, all-of-Nation, capabilities-based approach to preparedness.
Homeland Security Presidential Directive – 20	Relates to national continuity policy: This directive establishes a comprehensive national policy on the continuity of Federal Government structures and operations, and also creates the position of a single National Continuity Coordinator responsible for coordinating the development and implementation of Federal continuity policies. This policy establishes 'National Essential Functions,' prescribes continuity requirements for all executive departments and agencies, in order to ensure a comprehensive and integrated national continuity program that will enhance the credibility of our national security posture and enable a more rapid and effective response to and recovery from a national emergency.

Public Health and Medical Services include responding to medical needs associated with mental health, behavioral health, and substance abuse considerations of incident victims and response workers. Services also cover the medical needs of members of the "at risk" or "special needs" populations. Public Health and Medical Services includes behavioral health needs consisting of both mental health and substance abuse considerations for incident victims and response workers and, as appropriate, medical needs groups defined in the core document as individuals in need of additional medical response assistance and veterinary and/or animal health issues.
NRF: ESF 9 Search and Rescue Annex	Relates to the federal role in Search and Rescue: Search and Rescue (SAR) rapidly deploys Federal SAR resources to provide lifesaving assistance to State, tribal, and local authorities, to include local SAR Coordinators and Mission Coordinators, when there is an actual or anticipated request for Federal SAR assistance.
NRF: ESF 10 Oil and Hazardous Materials Response Annex	Relates to federal response to oil and hazardous materials incidents: Oil and Hazardous Materials Response provides Federal support in response to an actual or potential discharge and/or uncontrolled release of oil or hazardous materials when activated. Under the NRF , EPA and DHS/USCG maintain authority for classifying a discharge as a Spill of National Significance (SONS) for purposes of the National Contingency Plan (NCP). DHS may or may not decide that it should coordinate the Federal response to a SONS. If not, EPA or DHS/USCG leads the Federal response in accordance with the NCP.

Section V. Tribal Emergency Authorities

Note: The below information concerning tribal emergency management and emergency authority is paraphrased from the website of the NW Tribal Emergency Management Council. Some of this information was developed by Tim Sanders of the Gila River Indian Community in Arizona for a paper for the International Association of Emergency Managers (IAEM) describing Tribal Governments in the United States. The paper intent is to provide a short briefing about Tribal Governments to Emergency Managers and others with an interest in obtaining a better understanding of tribal governments. Input was also provided by Glenn Coil of the NW Tribal Emergency Management Council.

In General

Before the arrival of explorers from Europe and beyond, Indian people were already living in highly organized societies, with established forms of government, and with a special interest in protecting and preserving the "homeland". Our founding fathers used principles of Indian government as they built the framework for this country. Examples of Indian governance recognized leaders as servants of the people, made provisions for removing leaders who did not serve in the best interests of the people, upheld freedom of speech and expression in religious and political affairs and even provided for political participation by women. Many of these principles are echoed in our own constitution.

Currently, many tribal governments have adopted constitutions, articles of association, or other bodies of law, while some operate under traditional systems of governance. Most tribal governments have a chief executive officer or chief elected official, often called the tribal chairman, but may be known as the principle chief, governor, president, or some other name. Most tribal governments have a legislative body most often referred to as a tribal council. Some tribes are organized so that a vote by the membership is required to enact laws, resolutions, or other legislative matters.

Historically tribal governments and organized Indian societies have dealt with emergencies and disasters. Indian people have dealt with disaster using the resources at their disposal and depending on people helping people. Today, many tribal governments are recognizing the need for comprehensive emergency management programs and capabilities, and emergency management programs are being established.

Basis and Government to Government Recognition of Tribal Governments

Article 1, Section 8 of the U.S. Constitution reads, "The Congress shall have power to ... regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes." The Constitution recognizes that tribal governments exist and creates the basis for a unique and special relationship between the Federal government and tribal governments. Tribal governments are governments, they are not state governments, they are not local governments, and they are not special interest groups. The Supreme Court and the Congress have affirmed that they retain their inherent powers of self-government and self-determination. Treaties, laws, and Supreme Court decisions have resulted in a fundamental and legally binding contract between the Federal government and Indian tribal governments.

Today there are over 560 tribal governments, each one unique, recognized by the Federal government. "Recognition" is a legal term meaning that the United States recognizes and upholds a government-togovernment relationship with a tribe. A tribe exists in what is known as "domestic dependent nation status". Under the Federally Recognized Indian Tribe List Act of 1994, 25 U.S.C. 479a, tribes enjoy all the powers of self-government (tribal sovereignty) except those that Congress has specifically removed. They have the inherent right to make their own civil and criminal laws, have tribal courts to uphold these laws, the right to tax, license, and regulate, and to exclude persons from tribal lands. It also means that Tribal governments have the authority and responsibility for many governmental activities, including emergency management and may develop their own emergency authorities.

Under the law, Tribal members are eligible for certain services provided by the United States. American Indians and Alaska Natives are also citizens of the United States (Indian Citizenship Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1401, 1924) and the state where they reside, with the right to vote and run for office and the other rights that come with citizenship.

The United States, because of treaties, executive orders, Federal laws, and case law, has a legally enforceable fiduciary obligation to protect tribal self-governance and self-determination, tribal lands, tribal assets, cultural and historical resources, natural resources, and treaty rights. This is known as the Federal Trust Responsibility and has been upheld by the Supreme Court which defined trust responsibility as "moral obligations of the highest responsibility and trust." (Seminole Nation v. United States, 1942). Tribal governments are not subordinate to local or state governments, but frequently cooperate through intergovernmental agreements and strong working relationships, especially in the emergency management.

The United States, including all its agencies, are to deal with Indian tribes as governments, not special interest groups, individuals, or any other entity. No one can speak or do business for the tribe except the tribal government. Federal agencies should deal with them as governments, similar to the way they deal with state governments. Relationships between tribal and state governments should also be one of government-to-government.

Washington State Centennial Accord

There are twenty-six federally recognized Indian tribes in the state of Washington. Each sovereign tribe has an independent relationship with each other and the state. The Washington State Centennial Accord between the Federally Recognized Indian Tribes in Washington State and the State of Washington provides the framework for that relationship between the state of Washington, through the governor, and the signatory tribes.

This Accord dated August 4, 1989, was executed between the federally recognized Indian tribes of Washington signatory to this Accord and the State of Washington, through the governor, in order to better achieve mutual goals through an improved relationship between their sovereign governments. The Accord provides a framework for that government-to-government relationship and implementation procedures to assure execution of that relationship.

According to the Accord, each Party respects the sovereignty of the other. The respective sovereignty of the state and each federally recognized tribe provide paramount authority for that party to exist and to govern. The parties share in their relationship particular respect for the values and culture represented by tribal governments. Further, the parties share a desire for a complete Accord between the State of Washington and the federally recognized tribes in Washington reflecting a full government-to- government relationship and will work with all elements of state and tribal governments to achieve such an accord.

DHS / FEMA and Tribal Governments

In August of 1997, FEMA began the process of developing its policy for government-to-government relations with Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments. FEMA held several listening sessions and workshops with tribal representatives across the country. The final policy was published in the Federal Register, Vol. 64, Number 7, on January 12, 1999. The FEMA Tribal Policy as updated in June of 2010.

This document responds to the Presidential Memorandum directing each department and agency to develop a detailed plan of action for compliance with Executive Order (E.O.) 13175. In support of the Administration and DHS' effort, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) engaged all Federally-recognized Tribes to gather suggested revisions to FEMA's existing Tribal Policy. The revised policy statement was developed, based on feedback received, to enhance FEMA's relationship with the Nation's American Indian and Alaska Native Tribal communities to support preparing for, recovering from, mitigating, and responding to all natural and manmade hazards and disasters.

By developing and implementing this policy, FEMA affirmed recognition that tribal governments hold a unique status in the United States. The policy was developed to affirm the Agency's understanding, support, and pursuit of a government-to-government relationship with American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments. The policy principles are summarized below.

- FEMA recognizes and commits to a government-to-government relationship with American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments.
- FEMA will consult with American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments before taking actions that affect tribal governments to assure that tribal rights and concerns are addressed.
- FEMA acknowledges the trust relationship with American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments.
- FEMA will take steps to eliminate or diminish procedural impediments to working directly and effectively with tribal governments.
- FEMA will work with other Federal departments and agencies to enlist their support in support of the goals of this policy.
- FEMA will encourage cooperation and partnerships among Federal, Tribal, State, and local governments.
- FEMA acknowledges as precedents the policy commitments and decisions of the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the United States Government.
- FEMA will use its best efforts to institutionalize this policy within the fundamental tenets of the Agency's mission.

Executive Order 13175 (Consultation and Coordination with Indian Tribal Governments)

Executive Order 13175 replaced Executive Order 13084 (Consultation and Coordination with Indian Tribal Governments) and complements Executive Order 13132 (Federalism). It was published in the Federal Register, Vol. 65, Number 218, on November 9, 2000.

Following is an excerpt of the Executive Order as published in the Federal Register.

"The United States has a unique relationship with Indian tribal governments as set forth in the Constitution of the United States, treaties, statutes, Executive Orders, and court decisions. Since the formation of the Union, the United States has recognized Indian tribes as domestic dependent nations under its protection. The Federal Government has enacted numerous statutes and promulgated numerous regulations that establish and define a trust relationship with Indian tribes."

"Our Nation, under the law of the United States, in accordance with treaties, statutes, Executive Orders, and judicial decisions, has recognized the right of Indian tribes to self-government. As domestic independent nations, Indian tribes exercise inherent sovereign powers over their members and territory. The United States continues to work with Indian tribes on a government-to-government basis to address issues concerning Indian tribal self-government, tribal resources, and Indian tribal treaty and other rights."

"The United States recognizes the right of Indian tribes to self-government and supports tribal sovereignty and self-determination."

In March 2010, the Department of Homeland Security unveiled its "Department of Homeland Security Plan to Develop a Tribal Consultation and Coordination Policy Implementing Executive Order 13175" This document responds to the Presidential Memorandum directing each department and agency to develop a detailed plan of action for compliance with the Executive Order outlining strategies, tasks and a plan of action.

In May 2011, DHS signed the Department of Homeland Security Tribal Consultation Policy, pursuant to EO 13175, outlining the provisions that DHS will periodically consult with Tribal Governments to review the effectiveness of this DHS Tribal Consultation Policy and make revisions as necessary; strengthen government-to-government relationships, communications, and mutual cooperation between DHS and Tribal Governments.

Section VI. Case Law

Note: Much of the information in this section comes primarily from a presentation entitled "LEGAL ISSUES FOR PUBLIC LAWYERS IN DISASTER" developed by Joseph V. Panesko, an Assistant Attorney General in the Office of the Washington State Attorney General. It is included in this report with permission from the author. The original presentation provided some disaster facts, a brief overview of government's emergency response structure, and a description of legal issues that resulted from the 1999 WTO riots in Seattle and the 1980 eruption of Mt. St. Helens.

There have been numerous disasters and emergencies in recent history in Washington State. Some have been "natural", such as many floods, the eruption of Mt. St. Helens and the Nisqually earthquake. Some have been "man-made" such as oil spills and the WTO riots in Seattle. Local and state government has also exercised their emergency powers on numerous occasions. There has not been a great deal of case law derived from these events, but two specific incidents resulted in court cases where emergency authorities were questioned and subsequently interpreted by the court. Two are presented here to provide some background and explanation of governmental emergency authorities.

These events and the subsequent court cases provide a snapshot view of the scope of the government's "emergency authority" and what is the source of that power, government's Inherent police power, and constitutional and statutory grant of that authority.

Local Event – 1999 WTO Riots in Seattle

The World Trade Organization held a Ministerial Conference in Seattle, WA in late November, 1999 to launch a new millennial round of trade negotiations. The negotiations were disrupted by massive and controversial street protests outside the hotels and the Washington State Convention and Trade Center, on November 30, 1999 in what became the second phase of the anti-globalization movement in the United States. The scale of the demonstrations—even the lowest estimates put the crowd at over 40,000—dwarfed any previous demonstration in the United States against a world meeting of any of the organizations generally associated with economic globalization such as the WTO, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), or the World Bank.

Source=[http://www.flickr.com/photos/4 1267996@N00/125523970/WTO On the first day the protests were generally peaceful and estimates are that only about 1% of the demonstrators engaged in criminal activity. Civil authority was unable to contain the situation and it turned into civil unrest. Protestors in the street forced a delay in the WTO opening ceremonies. Further problems developed when self-proclaimed 'anarchists' joined the more serious WTO-focused protestors. By early afternoon, the Seattle Police Department (SPD) ran low on tear gas, bus service was suspended downtown, and many businesses had to close their doors. The Clinton administration ordered that either the protestors be controlled, or the government would cancel the WTO meeting. Seattle mayor Paul Schell declared a State of Emergency and ordered a curfew in downtown Seattle, among other measures. The National Guard and the Washington State Patrol were also called in to help maintain order. Police were ordered to clear downtown crowds, and forced their retreat to Belltown and lower Capitol Hill. During this forced retreat many businesses were vandalized by 'anarchist' protestors.¹

According to the WTO Commission, the Governor issued an Emergency Proclamation November 30th at 3:00pm and activated the National Guard. The Mayor, who had signed a declaration of emergency near the same time, issued numerous proclamations over the next 72 hours. The Mayor's proclamations ordered several specific impositions, including establishing an evening curfew at first and prohibiting the possession of a gas mask. The Mayor issued additional curfews and then issued a "curfew" that created an "exclusion zone" where individuals could enter only if they had business within the zone. The curfew/exclusion zone area was modified numerous times.

Several court cases resulted from the WTO event. They are summarized as follows:

John Citoli v. City of Seattle, 115 Wn. App. 459, 61 P.3d 1165 (2002)

Mr Citoli ran a packaging business on first floor of a 3 floor building. Protestors took over the 2nd and 3rd floors Sunday November 28th and barricaded themselves inside. Police responded, and rather than fight the protesters, Police directed the utilities to shut off power and gas. That unfortunately impacted Mr. Citoli's business, which permanently closed due to the adverse impacts of being shut down for a week. Citoli sued the utilities and the City, with the causes of action against the City being "Negligence", "Wrongful Interference of Business Relationships" and a "Section 1983 Claim" (violation of civil rights and taking of private property without due process of law).

In the determination of the Citoli case, the court held the following:

- Police acted reasonably in response to an emergency situation by shutting off utilities.
- "Where the necessities of war or civil disturbance require the destruction or injury of private property, the resulting losses must be borne by the owners of the property, in that the safety of the state in such cases overrides all considerations of private loss."

In this case, there was no discussion of the origin or the source of the city police power to take all necessary actions to protect the public. It is noted that the police actions commenced before any official emergency proclamation had been issued. The case relied on a case involving the Governor's emergency authority: Cougar Bus. Owners Association v. State, 97 Wn.2d 466, 647 P.2d 481 (1982). (This case is discussed later in this document). But Cougar Business Owners' Association regarded the Governor's emergency power on the state level. The Citoli Court blindly applied Cougar to facts of this case involving a city's emergency authority without any discussion about the appropriateness of that shift.² One such potential justification could have been the inherent police power authority granted to local governments under Article XI, Section 11 of the State Constitution.

Victor Menotti v. City of Seattle, 409 F.3d 1113 (9th Cir. 2005)

This case concerned a group of people arrested during the WTO riots who challenged the constitutionality of the city emergency orders and curfew area. Some brought individual claims for violation of constitutional rights. They questioned when government could permissibly narrow individuals' First Amendment Rights. The City described its interest in issuing the curfew area as being to protect the health and safety of citizens which was a traditional exercise of police powers. They maintained the City's interest was further specified as restoring order and maintaining security, which were necessary for public safety, effective commerce, and vitality of the city. The court accepted these governmental concerns as valid. Orders were issued in compliance with city ordinance.

In upholding the City's orders under its general police power authority, the Court declined to rely on separate case law from other states that had involved governmental response to unanticipated natural disasters. The out-of-state cases had justified curfews and other governmental responses in part because the disasters occurred without warning and justified an expedient and heightened government response. Here the Court implicitly found, and the record supported, that the City of Seattle had ample warning and opportunity to prepare. The City just hadn't anticipated the scope of the civil unrest that occurred during the protests.

The Menotti litigation continued over whether police overstepped their bounds in enforcing the emergency orders. There was a mixed jury verdict January 2007 – protesters were unlawfully arrested, but their 1st amendment right to free speech was not infringed. Questions remain regarding the legal source of political subdivision's power to step outside the status quo with legal orders and prohibitions. The general source of police power authority resides in Washington Constitution Article XI, § 11

• "Any county, city, town or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local police, sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws."

Some statutes do expressly allow political subdivisions to suspend or ignore general laws. As one example:

RCW 38.52.070(2):

." .. each political subdivision, in which any disaster . . . occurs, shall have the power to enter into contracts and incur obligations necessary to combat such disaster, protecting the health and safety of persons and property, and providing emergency assistance to the victims of such disaster. Each political subdivision is authorized to exercise the powers ... in the light of the exigencies of an extreme emergency situation without regard to time-consuming procedures and formalities prescribed by law (excepting mandatory constitutional requirements), including, but not limited to, budget law limitations, requirements of competitive bidding and publication of notices, provisions pertaining to the performance of public work, entering into contracts, the incurring of obligations, the employment of temporary workers, the rental of equipment, the purchase of supplies and materials, the levying of taxes, and the appropriation and expenditures of public funds.

This focuses on local government's own actions possibly not being constrained by normal procedural statutes. The law is not as clear about local government's ability to suspend or ignore substantive statutes such as environmental regulations or workplace safety regulations when conducting emergency responses.

State Level Event: The Eruption of Mt. St. Helens

The Pacific Northwest is a geologically dynamic region with numerous volcanoes. Mount St. Helens is an active strato-volcano located in Skamania County, Washington. It is 96 miles south of Seattle, Washington and 50 miles northeast of Portland, Oregon. Mount St. Helens takes its English name from the British diplomat Lord St Helens, a friend of explorer George Vancouver who made a survey of the area in the late 18th century. The volcano is located in the Cascade Range and is part of the Cascade Volcanic Arc, a segment of the Pacific Ring of Fire that includes over 160 active volcanoes.

On March 16, 1980, earthquakes began. While some emergency planning for volcanic eruptions of cascade volcanoes had been done, this event started an accelerated level of planning. A general timeline of events and planning issues are as follows:

- March 27 Crater dome breaks through ice cap with steam eruptions.
- Counties incur high costs in keeping sightseers away from the mountain
- Counties request State assistance.
- April 3 -- Governor issues emergency proclamation.
- State Patrol & National Guard assist with road blocks.
- April 25 Forest Service implements "Red Zone" & "Blue Zone" around the mountain.
- April 30 Governor issues an order mirroring Forest Service zones and adjusted multiple times over the next two weeks.
- By May 17 –bulge in north flank has grown 450'.
- Extreme amount of pressure by public and media on government officials to allow access
- May 18 with little warning, a 5.1 magnitude earthquake occurs and the mountain explodes
- Pyroclastic flows covered 6 square miles temperatures as hot as 1300°F.
- Lateral blast covered 230 square miles temperatures as hot as 660°F.
- Landslides buried 14 miles of North Fork Toutle River Valley to an average depth of 150 feet
- The maximum depth is 600 feet.
- Lahars & sediments filled much of Cowlitz river carrying capacity
- The Columbia River channel depth is reduced from 40 to 14 feet.
- There are 60 fatalities.
- There are 27 bridges & nearly 200 homes destroyed.
- There are 4 million board feet of timber blown down.
- There are 5 more, smaller eruptive events from May 19 through October 1980.

Two significant court cases resulted from the Mt. St. Helens eruption. They are summarized as follows:

Cougar Business Owners Association v. State, 97 Wn.2d 466, 647 P.2d 481 (1982)

Stores in the Town of Cougar, on Southwest flank of the mountain, sued the governor for keeping the town within the Red Zone too long (Oct. 1), adversely impacting their business. The case suggests that plaintiffs also raised complaint about the exclusion zones being imposed too early as well, but zones were only in place for 17 days prior to the eruption. The case went all the way to the Washington Supreme Court. The court found:

- The Governor's actions were proper exercises of her police power and thus did not constitute a taking of property without just compensation.
- Imposition of exclusion zones were discretionary acts and thus immune from tort liability.
- Governor had full statutory authority to act as she did. See RCW 43.06.010; .210, .220; RCW Ch. 38.52; RCW Ch. 38.08.
- Plaintiffs could have used extraordinary writ to challenge the zones at the time they were implemented if they believed their constitutional rights were being injured, but this tort lawsuit seeking financial damages after-the-fact is not allowable.

Karr v. State, 53 Wn. App. 1, 765 P.2d 316 (Div. I, 1988)

Barbara Karr & 13 other representatives sued State & Weyerhaeuser for wrongful death. The 14 victims represented by the plaintiffs had been outside the Blue and Red Zones. The plaintiffs argued the State was liable for failing to anticipate the scope of the eruption and failing to expand the protection zones so as to encompass the areas where the victims were killed. The court issued a summary judgment dismissal of the plaintiffs' claims, following the Cougar Business Owners Association case.

Common Law Emergency Response Concept

An ancient common law principle quoted from the Citoli case, above, provides that the Government in responding to a disaster to protect the welfare of the general public may incidentally cause damage to private property without having to pay compensation. This concept has been called, at times, the "conflagration doctrine," or the "law of necessity." Besides the Citoli case, this concept has been applied on other Washington cases as well.

In Short v. Pierce County, 194 Wash. 421, 78 P.2d 610 (1938), state and local emergency workers who stripped the topsoil from a riverside farm to make sandbags to protect the community against a flooding river were held not liable for damages to the farm, but county officials who remained on the private property after the flooding subsided to build permanent flood control improvements could be liable for that post-emergency occupation and use of the land. The court articulated the principle this way: ""It is the law that, in meeting an emergency, such as fire, flood, or pestilence, public officials and private citizens may employ almost any available means in an endeavor to control the danger."

More recently, in In re Property Located at 14255 53rd Ave., S., Tukwila, King County, Washington, 120 Wn. App. 737, 86 P.3d 222 (2004), the Court of Appeals followed the same common law principle when it ruled that the State did not owe compensation for entering private property to cut down trees that potentially hosted the devastatingly invasive citrus longhorned beetle that had been detected at a nearby plant nursery.

Statutory Sources of Authority to Ignore Statutes

RCW 38.52.110 is one example of legislative authority to agencies to ignore legal constraints when responding to emergencies at the request of the governor or local government executives. That statute provides as follows:

RCW 38.52.110: Use of existing services and facilities — Impressment of citizenry.

(1) In carrying out the provisions of this chapter, the governor and the executive heads of the political subdivisions of the state are directed to utilize the services, equipment, supplies, and facilities of existing departments, offices, and agencies of the state, political subdivisions, and all other municipal corporations thereof including but not limited to districts and quasi municipal corporations organized under the laws of the state of Washington to the maximum extent practicable, and the officers and personnel of all such departments, offices, and agencies are directed to cooperate with and extend such services and facilities to the governor and to the emergency management organizations of the state upon request notwithstanding any other provision of law.

(2) The governor, the chief executive of counties, cities and towns and the emergency management directors of local political subdivisions appointed in accordance with this chapter, in the event of a disaster, after proclamation by the governor of the existence of such disaster, shall have the power to command the service and equipment of as many citizens as considered necessary in the light of the disaster proclaimed: PROVIDED, That citizens so commandeered shall be entitled during the period of such service to all privileges, benefits and immunities as are provided by this chapter and federal and state emergency management regulations for registered emergency workers.

Another statutory example of waiver authority is RCW 43.06.220(2), which allows the Governor, after proclaiming a state of emergency, to waive or suspend statutory obligations for certain subject areas including L&I inspection fees, Utilities & Transportation Commission tariff and notice requirements, and tax deadlines.

Section VII. Issues and Recommendations

A survey was sent to all RCPGP jurisdictions to give the opportunity to provide information on the emergency authorities they relied upon and to identify issues, gaps and success stories in relation to emergency powers and authorities. In all, the surveys were sent by e-mail to the representatives on the RCPGP mailing list, the RCPGP Project Leads list and the Regional Interagency Steering Committee (RISC).

A total of twelve (12) were returned from Mason County, Thurston County, Kitsap County, Thurston County, Snohomish County, Pierce County, the Cities of Bellevue and Olympia, the Seattle – King County Health Department, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), the General Services Administration (GSA) and the US Army Corps of Engineers (COE).

The Regional Catastrophic Planning Team (RCPT) met on June 29, 2011 to discuss several issues and recommendations that had been identified through previous individual discussions or interviews. The results of the discussion moved issues into different groups; those that require legislative action, those that are best served by continuing coordination and planning, issues that should be reviewed at a later date, and those that should not be addressed by this group. Legislative issues were prioritized and are listed in order. Planning issues and those to be reviewed at a later date are in no particular order.

Legislative Issues

Priority 1 – Environmental regulations vs. emergency response

Several local jurisdictions identified issues concerning environmental regulations vs. emergency response. An example provided was conflicting emergency authorities between road crew's attempts to repair transportation infrastructure as soon as possible after an event and inconsistent restrictions being imposed by different regional state Department of Fish & Wildlife DFW) staff. There is the possibility of having different directions from state agencies on different parts of the same river system due to individual differences of opinion from state DFW staff.

Recommendation: There needs to be state standards for implementation of environmental considerations during disasters. At the present time, each regional biologist has a different perspective and thus different requirements for repair work. Efforts should be initiated to develop consistent standards where possible. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning and policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process. Legislative action may be needed.

Priority 2 – County executive's or commission's authority in regards to protective measures in cities

There is ambiguity as to the county executive's or commissioner's authority to implement protective action measures in cities in that respective county.

Recommendation – This issue needs legal review. To have this power added to Washington State statutes for County Executives to hold power over the authority of City elected and appointed officials would have to be addressed through the legislative process.

Priority 3 – Fire Mobilization for all hazards; Fire Chief vs. Emergency Manager

Any fire chief can request fire mob for "all hazard" events but local EM directors can't which creates a gap during events.

Recommendation - This can be overcome by having a fire chief or rep in the EOC, but this is not always possible. As the Fire Mobilization rules are statutory, this issue will have to be addressed through legislative action.

Priority 4 – Governor's authority regarding interim housing locations

It is critical that the Governor have the authority to waive state statutes and regulations as well as local codes, ordinances and regulations that impede the emergent sitting of FEMA trailers/community sites to provide temporary housing after a catastrophe. After a disaster that results in a substantially greater number of people made homeless than undamaged structures left standing to house them, it is FEMA policy to provide interim housing in the form of manufactured homes. The speed with which locations are found for manufactured homes and are put into service will be a major defining factor on recovery success.

As was seen in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, delays stimulate massive depopulation and can result in equivocal recovery at best. The placement of FEMA trailer parks – called "Community Sites" in FEMA lingo – requires compliance with both local zoning codes and SEPA statutory mandates. Jumping through such regulatory and statutory requirements in the wake of disaster can cause delays in getting the trailer parks up and running. It is therefore critical that the Governor have the authority to waive statutes and regulations as well as local codes, ordinances and regulations that impede the emergent sitting of FEMA trailers/community sites.

Recommendation - In discussions in the fall of 2010 between PCDEM's Paul Shukovsky's and WAEMD's Kurt Hardin and John Ufford, this matter was examined. Both Kurt and John cited the position asserted by Washington. Asst. A.G. Brian Buchholz's that RCW 43.06.220(1)(i) gives the Governor all the authority needed to achieve the aforementioned goal. However, both Pierce County Sr. Dep. Prosecuting Attorney Bob Dick's and Paul Shukovsky's reading of 43.06.220(1) (i) left both feeling that the state's position on this issue is not that clear. This issue was addressed in the court cases in the aftermath of Mt. St. Helens. See Case Law section of the report. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations and the planning and policy development process. No legislation or WAC development should be needed.

Priority 5 – EMS responders providing vaccinations

With respect to the state statute on application of vaccinations for H1N1 response, a county proclamation of emergency was required to engage EMS responders as able to inoculate against H1N1. This was an unnecessary use of a proclamation and created some confusion.

Recommendation – There should be a state statutory change in the Public Health Laws to allow EMS the ability to give injections under certain preventative circumstances. As the rules in such cases are regulatory and statutory, this issue will have to be addressed through legislative action and the regulation (WAC) development process.

Planning and Coordination Issues

Issue - MACC organization and operation

There is a lack of planning and clarity of how a regional multi-agency coordination center (MACC) would be organized and how it would operate. This includes strategies, plans and procedures to involve special taxing districts and private non-profits with government like services during an emergency.

Recommendation - Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations and the planning and policy development process. State EMD will recognize a MACC that has been provided authority by participating jurisdictions through a recognized agreement. Local jurisdictions could develop MACCs on their own for regional coordination purposes. Research should be conducted regarding eligibility for FEMA reimbursement of funds expended by this entity during a disaster as MACCs are considered.

Issue - Cross county coordination of health related issues involving State Department of Health

A local Health Department identified that more planning and coordination was needed for the implementation of state authorities that address cross-county consequences. When an event such as happened with H1N1 requires consistent implementation of measures in several different jurisdictions, coordination from the state is essential.

Recommendation – The State Health Officer has the same authority of the local Health Officer and can exercise this authority when a local health officer requests it, when a local health officer is unable to or when a local health officer is unwilling to implement required health measures, or in the judgment of the Secretary of Health the public health demands it. It is recommended that the State needs to define in writing thresholds for when they deem state PH authorities are necessary. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning, policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process and should not need legislative action.

Issue – Health laws and overlapping authority between local, state, and federal

A local Health Department also identified that there is overlapping authority among federal quarantine stations, the State Public Health Officer and local health officers and a lack of clarity of when authority and responsibility for detaining ill passengers, and then transporting them to their place of residence, transitions from federal to state to local officials; This includes the issue of who has the authority to order public health measures on tribal lands.

Recommendation - More planning needed with federal agencies, local and state PH on transitioning authorities and responsibilities; and, Federal agencies need to take the lead on answering the tribal lands question so agencies can include this guidance in their plans. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning and policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process and should not need legislative action.

Review at a Later Date

Issue – Clarifying State processes regarding resource coordination

A more clearly defined process of coordinating resources through the State would be beneficial.

Recommendation - Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations and the planning and policy setting process. No legislation of WAC development should be needed. The Regional Resources Management and Logistics Annex addressed some of these issues.

Issue – Mutual aid for non first response agencies

There is a lack of mutual aid agreements for typical non first response agencies or for those not covered under current legislation. Jurisdictions have sent non-traditional first responders, such as building inspectors to assist in other counties. The response was impeded by a lack of mutual aid agreements. Each time it has been worked out on a case by case basis, but more work is needed on model templates for local jurisdictions to develop these agreements.

Recommendation – Mutual aid legislation has been recently passed by the legislature that should help in this matter for county, city and town resources through their respective emergency management agencies. RCW 38.52.091 provides legal authority for local emergency management to develop mutual aid agreements. The statutory authorities are there for most first response agencies. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations and the planning and policy development process.

Issue – Fatalities in a Public Health Emergency

There is ambiguity with respect to fatalities in a public health emergency. Deaths legally don't require coroners' involvement if the death is of natural causes. This potentially raises such questions as "Who is in charge of fatality management if a jurisdiction has no more capacity to handle bodies?"

Recommendation – Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning and policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process and should not need legislative action.

Issue – Schools and Emergency Management

There is a statutory and regulatory nexus between EM and schools regarding training and exercises and disaster response authorities are ambiguous. RCW 38.52 and WAC 118.30 provide guidance on emergency management plans and programs. RCW 28A.320.125 provides requirements and guidance for planning, training and exercise in the State's schools. That statute only encourages schools to coordinate with their local emergency management office.

Recommendation – Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning and policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process. However, in tight budget times, only encouraging is not very compelling to get groups to work together. Legislative action may be needed for funding or stronger language to encourage coordination.

Issue – Hospital & physician patient standards of care in emergency incidents

There is ambiguity as to who has the authority to change hospital and physician patient standards of care and protocols in emergency incidents.

Recommendation – During disasters and emergencies when the medical system is overwhelmed, new protocols may be needed to address the needs of patient care. It is unclear at this time as to who has the authority to do this. Addressing this issue could be done through negotiations, planning and policy setting and the regulation (WAC) development process.

1. Please cite any state statutes or local codes which provide you or your organization with specific emergency authority. (Example: RCW 38.52.110, or a particular County or City code. You do not have to summarize what it is—we can look it up .)
2. Describe any experience you have had where there were issues or conflicts among different emergency authorities of local or state officials. (Example: Conflict between emergency response requirements and environmental laws and regulations in flood fighting)
3. If you had a the situation.	n experiences in #2, please describe what you feel should be done to correct

4. Describe any situations where you felt there were gaps in emergency authorities that prevented or interfered with what you felt was an appropriate response. (Example: Lack of the authority to require mandatory evacuation in the threat of a natural disaster)

5. If you had an experiences in #4, please describe what you feel should be done to correct the situation.

6. Describe any situation where you feel there is ambiguity in emergency authorities. (Example: The emergency authority of county or city elected officials and the emergency authority of other elected and appointed officials from other public agencies such as ports, school districts, health departments, etc.)

7. If you had an experiences in #6, please describe what you feel should be done to correct the situation.

8. Describe any situation where you feel existing emergency authorities are working well.
(Example – Delegation of Authority under the Fire Mobilization Plan or the emergency authority of a county or city to finance disaster costs.)
